THAAN

Thaan Charcoal is natural, Thai-Style binchotan extruded log charcoal. It is a long burning, clean and natural alternative to commercial charcoal briquettes. It is made sustainably from orchard grown rambutan fruit wood, which imparts a very mild flavor, letting your grilled food speak for itself. Thaan Charcoal's consistent, even heat is easy to cook with, and is great for any style of solid fuel cooking: grilling, BBQing, indirect cooking and particularly good where binchotan charcoal is traditionally used.

bizen black water konro

The Bizen Black Water Konro is a stunning option for grilling at the table. The warm brown clay and unglazed texture contribute to the rustic aesthetic that makes the Bizen collection so popular. With its gentle color gradation and tactile appeal, this konro is perfect for creating an atmosphere that is at once sophisticated and unpretentious.

how to use

Remove the inner white bowl and pour water into the black outer konro base. Fill the inner bowl with charcoal over a direct flame until the charcoal is burning, then replace the inner bowl into the outer konro. The water acts as an insulating layer, keeping the exterior of the konro cool while preventing cracking, burning and scorching of wooden surfaces. The water also serves to neatly contain any excess oil and ash for easy clean-up.
